REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

To the Trustees of Wellesley College:

I have the honor to present the report for the year 1947-48, the seventy-third session of Wellesley College.

The Board of Trustees

The Board of Trustees has enjoyed the services of Mr. William T. Aldrich for the eighteen years which are permitted by the by-laws of the College. Mr. Aldrich has rendered the kind of service which is possible only to a person of unusual skill. He has served the College officially as the architect of two most satisfactory buildings, Munger Hall and the Recreation Building. In addition to these professional services, he has given generously of his architectural and artistic experience as a member of the Buildings Committee. It is with a great sense of loss that we submit to the retirement of Mr. Aldrich in conformity to the by-laws. We shall treasure his help from the past and warn him now that we do not hesitate to call upon former members of our Board in emergencies.

It is the practice of the Alumnae Association not to re-elect its official representatives on the Board, and the trustees acquiesced, therefore, in the termination of the membership of Mrs. James Gordon Gilkey (Calma Howe '15), who has been an interested and active member for the last six years. Her work as a member of the Executive Committee and as a special consultant for the Board on matters related to the Page Memorial School has brought her into close touch with the work of the Board. She has also served as chairman of the New England Region of the 75th Anniversary Fund campaign and as such she continues her active service to the College.

Mrs. Gilkey will be succeeded on the Board by Mrs. Lee Morey (Elizabeth King '19). Mrs. Morey's active participation in the work of the Alumnae Association as a former member of the Alumnae Fund Committee and as an active worker on behalf of Wellesley in New York City makes her a very valuable addition.

In June 1948 the Board welcomed into membership Mr. James Lawrence, Jr., of Boston. Mr. Lawrence not only brings to the Board experience in civic activities of a variety of sorts, but as an architect he will help to fill the vacancy created by the termination of Mr. Aldrich's term of service.

The Faculty

The only retirement from the faculty in June was that of Katy Boyd George, Associate Professor of Biblical History. Miss George came to the faculty twenty-two years ago after service as secretary for the Young Women's Christian Association. She has served as an interesting and vigorous teacher, as a faithful and effective member of the Academic Council and its committees, and as counselor to hundreds of students who have found her advice one of the special assets of their Wellesley life.

An unusual number of academic honors came to members of the faculty this spring. Two members of the Department of Zoology, Miss Mary L. Austin and Mrs. Louise P. Wilson, received awards which will enable them to carry on their individual problems in cancer research in the college laboratories. It is also expected that Miss Elizabeth Jones will continue her cancer research when she returns from a sabbatical year spent at the Cancer Research Institute at Bethesda, Maryland. Research grants in the social sciences were made by the Rockefeller Foundation to Professor Leland H. Jenks of the Sociology department and by the Social Science Research Council to Miss Alona E. Evans, Assistant Professor of Political Science, both of whom will be absent next year. Professor Dorothy M. Robathan of the Latin department received a research fellowship from the American Academy in Rome where she will spend the year. Two assistant professors will be absent on post-doctoral fellowships awarded by the American Association of University Women: Miss Miriam C. Ayer of the Mathematics department and Miss Margaret K. Seikel of the Chemistry department.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Hubert W. Lamb, Associate Professor of Music, will spend the year on musical composition as a Guggenheim Fellow.

Many others have held office in professional societies. Special mention should be made of the election of Joan Fiss Bishop, Director of the Placement Office, as President of the Council of Guidance and Personnel Associations. Mrs. Bishop is the first woman to be at the head of this Council which is the coordinating body for eight organizations.

The appointment of Miss Florence L. King as Librarian was announced in January. She will take office in August after completing her year's work at Denison University in Ohio. The Library has functioned effectively during this interim year under the direction of Hannah D. French, Acting Librarian, assisted by the entire staff, and especially by Miss Margaret M. Boyce and Miss Helen Joy Sleeper who, with Miss French, constituted the executive committee of the Library. The College is indebted to all the library staff for carrying on so cheerfully in spite of being short-handed. The willingness of the librarians to direct their energy from work of special interest to general administrative responsibility was a major contribution to the well-being of the College.

75th Anniversary Fund

The outstanding occupation of the President's office, as of most others, during the year has been the work of the 75th Anniversary Fund. When the Board of Trustees decided that the 75th Anniversary, to be celebrated in June 1950, should be accompanied by a campaign for increased funds they asked the Board of the Alumnae Association if the alumnae would assume responsibility for the first phase of the campaign. With enthusiasm and high courage the alumnae rallied to the call of the trustees and undertook to raise in the first year the amount of two and a half million dollars for salaries and scholarships and to find money for a dormitory to cost one and a half million dollars in addition to such funds as were already available in the unrestricted funds of the College. During the academic year 1947-48 the alumnae have organized a most amazing campaign machinery which has called Wellesley College to the attention of friends of education throughout the nation. Indeed, the committee for work with alumnae overseas has made it possible to attract the thoughtful attention and the gifts of alumnae from all around the world.

The final report of this year of the campaign is not complete enough to include an accurate statement of the number of women who have devoted themselves unstintingly to the service of their college. We did not find a donor for the dormitory, nor was it possible to find large enough sums of money to make erection of that building possible. However, if we include pledges payable by 1950, the campaign has increased the resources of Wellesley by $2,792,558. In addition to strengthening the endowment and providing something toward a dormitory and a library, the campaign has awakened the interest of a great many people. The solicitation of gifts and the special projects of the alumnae in local communities have introduced the College most favorably to their neighbors. The new or renewed concern about the College is in itself an asset to those who are undertaking to maintain the purposes of the College in these years of unusual demand on educational institutions.

A campaign of the dimensions of "the 75th" requires careful organization. Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Theodore C. Haffenreffer (Marie Rahr '11), a trustee of the College, and with Miss Vida Buist as the executive director, Miss Jean Glasscock '33 as the publicity director, Miss Margery S. Foster '34 as the deputy comptroller in charge of the campaign funds, and a staff of some ten assistants, the office has functioned efficiently and economically. It has been unique, so far as we know, in the use of I.B.M. machines for the recording of gifts in a college campaign of this kind. The full report of the campaign with a financial statement will be available within a few months. We now know, however, that the overhead of the campaign has proved to be less than five percent of the amount raised.

As part of the campaign program, Mrs. J. L. R. de Morinni (Clara More '04) and Mrs. George E. Beggs were appointed as assistants to the President. The work of these officers is related very closely to that of the campaign office since they act as interpreters of the College off the campus and as hostesses on the campus. In addition to her duties through the year, Mrs. Beggs is the administrative co-ordinator for the summer program and will next year serve as head of the graduate clubhouse in addition to her other work as Assistant to the President.

No one who has not been close to the operation of the College could know the extent to which the workers in the campaign office and in all the related offices have given of themselves on behalf of the College. This report offers me an opportunity to express to the trustees the high regard in which I hold the many people who have made it possible for our representatives in the alumnae groups around the world to achieve the remarkable result which was achieved in a year of great financial uncertainty, of inflation, and of all kinds of financial complications.

The impetus for giving which has been generated by this campaign has been great. Had we maintained for twenty-five years the contacts which were established at the time of the Semi-Centennial Fund there might have been more financial results for the effort which has gone into the presentation of Wellesley's present needs. It is the belief of many of our alumnae, a belief which I now share, that there ought to be a competent and able executive at the College devoting full time to the maintenance of these relationships off the campus and supervising the work on the campus resulting from such activity. It is my hope that during the course of the next academic year the appointment of a vice-president for public relations may be made. In the meantime arrangements have been made to continue the fund office until June, 1950, as a central office for the receipt of gifts from both alumnae and non-alumnae, and the director of the continuing campaign will be Miss Margery Foster who has been the deputy comptroller.

Wellesley College owes great appreciation to Miss Buist who came to us with no Wellesley connections and has made herself a true friend of the College by her efficient organization of the office as director of the campaign. We will see her go with real regret at the loss of a good friend and with high regard for her ability as a campaign executive.

WELLESLEY COLLEGE

Admission Policy

Among the most interesting and time absorbing discussions of the past year have been those concerning the admission policy as it relates to race and religious affiliation as factors in the selection of students. It has been the practice for many years at Wellesley to select a freshman class from among candidates fully qualified for entrance in such a way that geographic, racial, and religious groups would be represented in proportion designed to provide varied contacts while maintaining so far as possible a prejudice-free community. Stimulated by the consideration of the Fair Educational Practices Act passed in New York State and proposed in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the faculty were asked to discuss the practice of their Board of Admission. By an overwhelming majority the faculty recommended that the selection of students should be made on the basis of individual qualifications for admission to the College without reference to race or religious affiliation. It seemed to be the majority opinion that the creation of an abnormally prejudice-free community at the expense of having students admitted as representatives of groups rather than as individuals was not the best way to oppose racial and religious prejudice. It was voted, therefore, that for the classes entering in the fall of 1949 and thereafter the inquiries about race and religion should be omitted from application blanks. Applications for the class entering next fall were complete when the change in policy was made so that the data were available but were not used for the purpose of group representation.

It seems to me unfortunate that a liberal arts college which has determined on a policy of selection without reference to proportional distribution of racial and religious groups should have to deprive itself of relevant information about students in order to prove its sincerity. Both race and religion are important facts in the experience of individuals, and a girl's record can be judged more intelligently if these relationships are known. It is a witness to the tragic state of human relations even in free America that the way to prove good faith toward members of minority groups has to be by studied ignorance of their membership in those groups! However, since this seems to be the conclusive way to demonstrate good faith in these days of tension, Wellesley will delete inquiries about race and religion from future applications for entrance.

Every effort will be made on the campus to avoid the creation or tolerance of prejudices in a community whose group representation is now uncontrolled numerically. Without the aid of a controlled racial and religious distribution we are challenged to find better ways to maintain a prejudice-free community.

The Design of the College

Three or four apparently unconnected matters of business have combined to focus trustee attention on the present-day meaning of the historic "design of Wellesley College". In the spring of 1947 it read:

"The College was founded for the glory of God and the service of the Lord Jesus Christ by the education and culture of women. To realize this design it is required that two-thirds of the trustees shall be members in good standing of some evangelical church, that every teacher shall be of decided Christian character and influence, and in manifest sympathy with the religious spirit and aim with which the College was founded; . . ."

The widespread discussions of education and its relation to religious emphases led to some consideration of this statement a year ago. At that time the by-laws were amended to emphasize the importance of the faculty as a whole and thus permit the inclusion of individuals of other than the Christian faith.

This year the Clerk of the Board checked the church membership of the trustees in connection with the work of the Nominating Committee and called attention to the fact that we were approaching too large a number of members of "non-evangelical" churches. The Board therefore voted to amend the by-laws which now read as follows:

"The College was founded for the glory of God and the service of the Lord Jesus Christ by the education and culture of women. To realize this design it is required that a majority of the trustees shall be members in good standing of some evangelical church, that the members of the faculty shall be selected with a view to maintaining the Christian purpose of the College; . . ."

WELLESLEY COLLEGE

The 75th Anniversary has refreshed memories about the early days of the College, and the intention of the founders to establish a Christian college has been re-emphasized as we have reread this history.

The Board of the Christian Association a year ago urged a study of the place of that organization in the life of the College. A faculty-student committee under the chairmanship of Assistant Professor Herbert Gale of the Department of Biblical History has been at work all year proposing student reorganization. These studies have precipitated several questions which indicate that modern undergraduates have not been aware of the historic emphasis of the institution.

Several statements made during the consideration of the admission policy suggested that Wellesley is essentially a secular institution in which religious affiliations are not very important. It seemed timely to consider the statement of the purpose of the College to see whether or not it continues to be an accurate one and, if so, what it really means for a college in the twentieth century. The following statement is the answer which the Board of Trustees adopted in connection with the amendments to the by-laws. The Board clearly did not want to alter the purpose of the founders although the methods of achieving that purpose have changed.

“Wellesley College was chartered in 1870 and the first official statement of its design was: ‘The College was founded for the glory of God and the service of the Lord Jesus Christ by the education and culture of women.’ While asserting this Christian motive, its founders repudiated all forms of sectarianism.

“The trustees believe that the fulfillment of this purpose in the twentieth century obligates a college so dedicated to (1) provide an opportunity for corporate worship in non-sectarian Christian services; (2) encourage understanding of the Christian conviction through appraisal of it by Christians and non-Christians; (3) increase understanding and goodwill among Christians of all varieties and between Christians and non-Christians; (4) provide opportunities for study of contemporary problems in the light of ethical principles shared by Christians and non-Christians; (5) provide opportunities for the overt expression of a desire to serve other people through the use of one’s time, energy, and money.

“The achievement of this religious objective of the College is not the responsibility of any one agency within the college community. It is shared by academic departments and numerous extracurricular organizations and agencies. Some agencies concern themselves primarily with certain phases of the religious activities. Others serve the religious purpose of the College only incidentally if at all.

"Individuals of all faiths or none should be free to participate in the activities of any all-college organization with the assurance that such participation does not involve them in creedal commitments. People of like-faiths who want to avow their distinctive commitments should be encouraged to do so."

The proposal of the faculty-student committee on the reorganization of religious activities includes establishment of the Wellesley College Community Chapel which shall be administered by a joint board of faculty and students, together with the organization of a Service Organization. The thought is that each of these agencies shall be the official body for organizing those aspects of the community which have to do with worship and with social service so that the College will function institutionally without obligating individuals to commit themselves to creedal statements in the area of Christian worship. Action on this report of the committee will be consummated next fall.

The State of the College

The President receives annual reports from the chairman of each academic and administrative department and from the heads of student organizations. These reports are available to any member of the Board who cares to read them, but they are too long to publish in this bulletin. Their details are fascinating and are the basis for much of the action of each successive year, action reported to the trustees and others through the College News, the Catalogue, and other publications of the College. To supplement the reports of action I want to make three general observations.

(1) The first is that the College has ceased to be a self-contained and closely knit entity. All the departments report considerable contact with agencies and organizations outside the College. The number and variety of non-Wellesley contacts increase every year. The budget of the College shows, for instance, that we paid institutional dues to twenty-nine organizations at a total cost of $2,256. Year after year some new group is formed which calls for cooperation from all the institutions in a given area.

If we are not going to meetings we are taking classwork out of the classroom. Our Sociology department has made a follow-up study of its recreation survey of the Town of Wellesley. The Psychology department introduced more field work into its courses. The children's posture clinic has been continued in the Hygiene and Physical Education department. The Botany department has opened its laboratories and greenhouses to garden clubs. The language clubs have had open meetings for many visitors. The Biblical History department has furnished speakers to many schools and churches through the area.

Student activities are normally intercollegiate now. The English department received invitations which we could not afford to accept to send students to take part in various symposia and colloquia in other institutions. The students who competed in an essay contest were asked to go to Duke University to discuss with other winners the results of their efforts. Students in the Speech department have annual poetry reading contests and meetings with other colleges. The Herald-Tribune Forum calls for student representatives, and the president of the College Forum reports that Wellesley sent delegates to conferences at Wesleyan, Williams, Mt. Holyoke, Barnard, Lindenwood, and Harvard. The Christian Association has a special committee on intercollegiate conference representation. The Athletic Association participated in hockey competitions in Boston and in a basketball day at Radcliffe. A student attended a meeting of the Americans for Democratic Action in Philadelphia. The College Government Association has joined the National Student Assembly and sends delegates to meet with representatives from colleges and universities all over the country.

What was once a rather quiet place of withdrawal where young women were visited occasionally by distinguished guests from outside has now become the headquarters for a peripatetic group of scholars who may be almost anywhere in the country, getting genuine inspiration for the work which they come back to Wellesley to do. I have no wish to deplore a situation which seems to me a normal part of modern American education, but I mention it as a fact with which we have to deal in planning not only our academic and our social program but in considering our financial problem in the years ahead. It all costs money!

(2) A second observation is that we need a new kind of teacher. Barriers between departments seem to be crumbling in a healthy fashion. The Dean of Instruction reminds me of the various interdepartmental courses which are or soon will be in operation in the biological sciences and in the physical sciences, and of such honors programs as those in medieval studies, in Latin American studies, and in international relations. This is a move in the right direction but it puts new and heavier demands on faculty members who need to be not only experts in their own specialization but scholars with interests general enough to bridge the gap between their specialization and that of other specialists. The difficulty in finding textbooks and in finding teachers who are ready to teach courses which cut across traditional academic boundaries is a revelation and a challenge.

(3) We need to strengthen good relations between the groups which constitute the College. The fact that we are living in an era of decentralization where all members of the college community are in increasingly close contact with people not related directly to the College means that we must either choose between being a decentralized and casually organized community or devote conscious attention to building up relationships between the groups which constitute the College.

My own preference is for the latter procedure since one of the unusual assets of a liberal arts college, especially the separate college for women, is the fact that it can be a demonstration of good community relationships. It was easy to be that in the days when there were few interruptions and the college authorities had complete control of the time of undergraduates. It is much harder to demonstrate group community relationships in these days of shifting pulls and pressures. Experience in community living is more important than ever, however, in these days when all society is subject to distractions, tending to disorganize community life. It seems to me important that the College itself should not feel stratified and segmented into mutually exclusive groups where faculty know faculty but are not acquainted with students, and where students think of no relationships except those with their contemporaries, and domestic employees live in a world of their own.

(a) The official relationship between the students and faculty has long been recognized as a joint responsibility on the part of both older and younger scholars in the government of the College. The clearest demonstration of that relationship has been in the organization of the College Government Association in which, under the leadership of an elected student, faculty members participate with undergraduates on the governing board. It has been a matter of some concern to me that this relationship has become more or less formalized through the years so that a handful of faculty members and students are aware of it. It would be a foolish waste of time for faculty members to concern themselves with all the details of undergraduate organization. It is equally unnecessary for students to be concerned about all phases of academic administration. However, there needs to be a very conscious awareness on the part of both groups that they are mutually responsible for certain phases of the community program which affect the specialized interests of both groups. This seems to me to be explicit in the organization of such a project as the proposed Community Chapel and the Service Organization where, as members of the community, whatever our age, we are concerned with these human activities.

It is clear that work as partners on common projects helps to acquaint older and younger people with each other as individuals rather than as types, and that what we can do to foster personal friendship and acquaintance will strengthen the community of scholars. This ties in with the importance of faculty housing which seems to me to have genuine educational importance. The undergraduates are hospitable to faculty members as they entertain them in their dormitories. A great many of our faculty people are living under crowded circumstances and are not in a position to reciprocate that hospitality. It is unfortunate that there are not more homes in the immediate proximity of the College where undergraduates can feel at home so that they feel that a root is established within the academic community even apart from their undergraduate relationship to it. Our 75th Anniversary Fund does not include faculty housing as a specific item because salaries and scholarships and student residences and the library seem to have more urgency. I do not want to have the importance of housing ignored by this postponement, however, because it seems to me to be a large factor in building the kind of community in which age and youth can work together. The larger society needs this kind of experience conspicuously.

(b) The relationship between faculty and trustees has always been a source of satisfaction to people who know the possibilities of understanding between two such groups. The actual fact is, however, that there are a few trustees who are known to a few faculty members but the groups are pretty nearly anonymous apart from the few exceptions which prove the rule. For that reason it seems to me important that an effort be made to acquaint individuals more widely with individuals of the other group. A beginning has been made in that direction by the work of the joint faculty-trustee committees such as the Pension Board, the Library Council, the Friends of the Museum and the Library. There is probably too little of this type of informal committee work. A further effort is made in the establishment of faculty-trustee conferences in connection with the October and May meetings of the Board of Trustees. It is to be hoped that we can build up more acquaintance between faculty and trustees in the interest of dividing responsibilities with complete confidence on the part of both groups that their friends in the other group will be acting in accordance with common purposes.

(c) The relationship between the Union representing the domestic and grounds employees and the management of the College is a healthy and normally happy one. The officers who represent the management in conference with the Union representatives have the confidence of the men with whom they negotiate and are fine spokesmen for the College. I refer particularly to Mr. Height, the Assistant Treasurer and Business Manager, and to Miss Crawford, the Director of the Employment office. It seems to me, however, that we have not been as imaginative as a liberal arts college like Wellesley should be in devising a procedure for labor-management relations which would be independent of personalities. We have an opportunity in a college where we are dealing specifically with human relations to work out a better method than that of the bargaining between competing groups which is characteristic of the industrial world. Our employees and our college officers are colleagues and not competitors, and I hope the years ahead will see the growth of the kind of relationship with the Union which will give its members the feeling of participating fully in the enterprise of which they are an essential part.

(d) The relationship between the Alumnae Association and the College has been traditionally the happiest of relationships, but the future calls for an even closer integration of activity between the trustees, the administration of the College, and the work of the Alumnae Association. The joint committees which have been responsible for the 75th Anniversary Fund have established a pattern of cooperative endeavor which might well serve as an example for the post-campaign permanent organization. It is my personal hope that the experience of the next two years of having a central fund office for the 75th Anniversary campaign will lead us to maintain such an office after the campaign is over so that funds from alumnae and non-alumnae can be centrally received, recorded, and distributed. This would have to involve a careful study of the relationship between the Alumnae Association and the Board of Trustees which would insure the complete autonomy of the Association which has up to this point assured its autonomy through the control of its own fund.

(e) The introduction of a Sophomore Fathers' Day a year ago demonstrated the value to the College of this type of project which helps parents of students to feel that they know and understand the workings of the College. The parents whom we welcomed a year ago have already proved themselves invaluable as active workers on behalf of the Fund. The sophomore parents who came this spring were generous as contributors and active as workers on behalf of the College. The enthusiasm which they engender has far more than a financial benefit. It seems self-evident but is not always recognized that there must be cooperation between parents and teachers and counselors all through the college experience, since all of them are involved in the well-being of the students. It seems desirable, therefore, to strengthen the relationship between the parents and the College so that each will come to a clear understanding of the problems of the other. This is one of the very time consuming but eminently helpful services rendered by the Class Deans.

Financing the Independent College

The independent college faces a problem in finance which has not yet been solved to the satisfaction of any of us. With every other institution in the country, Wellesley faces the fact of increased costs of operation. Inflation which affects private families also affects the College. Labor costs are enormous compared to the prewar costs, and while no one regrets the additional income which is now available for employees, the total cost makes an enormous increase in the operating budget.

Another factor affects the budgets of women's colleges. The increasing recognition of women's colleges as places of full-fledged academic stature adds to the responsibilities of the institution and thereby increases its expenses. The contacts to which I referred earlier with all kinds of agencies and the intercollegiate recognition of Wellesley mean that travel costs and entertainment costs and costs of time for executives and various other expenses are the price which must be paid for these increased contacts. Part of this is inevitable if we are going to carry on our share of the load. For instance, this year the foreign student advisers organized a new organization. Miss Roehm of our staff is a pioneer in this work and has been very helpful among other colleges in sharing her experience with them, but when the organization was formed it added to our budget both membership dues and the cost of travel for Miss Roehm to an organization which has no other support than from its member colleges. It thus adds expense while giving us increased influence and distinction.

The developing institution has to pay more, not only for the equipment and material it has always had, but the very fact of its growth and vigor means that it has increasing wants. A small department with very few students doing elementary work is not very expensive. Just as soon as it begins to be a vigorous, active department it calls for more equipment and more instruction. It has been interesting to watch the development of the departments of Sociology and Political Science since they were separated from the older and longer established departments of Economics and History. The parent departments have maintained themselves with fine vigor, but the two which were the new and struggling minority groups have now grown to comparable strength and each must have its adequate staff and equipment. These signs of healthy growth are to be encouraged and they give great satisfaction. They do, however, mean ever increasing expense.

We are under constant pressure to increase the kind of interest which is always peripheral to departments. The Psychology department reports that the introduction of clinical psychology would be a very natural next step for undergraduate work. The Director of the Page Memorial School reports that the introduction of such a phase of psychology would be of great strength to the School. If we are going to keep in the vanguard of educational development, some of these things would seem to be obvious expansions. Meanwhile a healthy college does not slough off the old every time it adopts the new. The departments of the classics are expensive per capita, but if there is any place in the world where a great classic tradition is to be maintained it should be in the liberal arts college. It is not always possible, therefore, to substitute one venture for another, and as the social sciences expand the classics retract, but only to a certain minimum point beyond which they must not be allowed to lose the staff and equipment which they need in order to maintain their vitality.

In order to bring a strong faculty together, it is of the utmost importance that scholars should be equipped with adequate facilities for conducting their work. I note in one of the reports the remark that a particular piece of equipment is in use in many graduate schools and the department has not yet decided which model is most desirable for its use. The number of graduate students in that department is very small, but the professors who expect their students to go on into graduate work elsewhere want them introduced to the finest possible equipment. In the work which individual members of that department are doing they, too, need the kind of equipment which men in universities have at their disposal if our colleagues are to be satisfied with staying in a college which is predominantly undergraduate.

All these factors add up to an increasing cost of education in the independent liberal arts college. The story has been told so often and so widely through the public press about the need for salary increases that I mention it only to report that of course that is one of the points at which inadequate expenditures lose vast strength for the institution.

Faced with this problem of increasing costs, its solution is extremely difficult. Obviously we have recognized the importance of increasing our endowment through gifts. Our experience in the campaign has demonstrated that Wellesley has a great many friends, but we have not been able to tap large resources. The largest single gift in the 75th Anniversary Fund to date is $35,000. To have achieved nearly $2,800,000 from gifts and pledges smaller than that demonstrates the breadth of Wellesley loyalty. It also demonstrates the fact that we will not soon build up rapid or large endowment from gifts of those dimensions. Important as it seems to continue to hope for large gifts and to work for them, the expectation of receiving large capital gifts is not a very great one in the immediate future. This makes it very important to do all we can to encourage bequests so that we may inherit capital gifts from friends who are not able to make them during their lifetime.

Another obvious suggestion for increasing income is to increase our fees. Wellesley now charges $1400 which is less than that of several of our sister colleges. Mount Holyoke is charging $1500, Smith, $1400, and Vassar, $1600. The possibility of charging more here is a very real one but it should be noted that with every increase in fee it has seemed to be necessary to increase the amount of scholarships since 25% of our students now receive scholarship assistance. To ask that 25% to pay even $100 more would presumably mean the loss of many of those students. We should deplore such a loss. Moreover, in discussing the possibility of increasing fees we must face the fact that the peak of college enrollment has been reached and that if numbers of students going into colleges all over the country should decline markedly in the next few years, there would be a fair question whether this is a good time to make it more expensive to come to an eastern college than it now is. Nevertheless, if we should decide to increase the fees further it would not answer the problem of the future if prices rise more or less indefinitely.

It seems increasingly clear that if an independent college would maintain itself it must have increasingly large annual gifts. Many people cannot make capital gifts but could give the income from appreciable sums of capital. It is important to build up a kind of organization which will encourage alumnae gifts of much larger dimensions than those which we have received normally through the Alumnae Fund and at the same time to encourage a much larger number of non-alumnae donors who can be counted upon to make annual gifts.

No one should be asked to contribute to a college which is extravagant in its operation, and it seems very important that concurrently with a campaign for funds should go a careful study of expenditures to be sure that we are using what resources we have in the very best fashion. This is the reason that the Committee on Curriculum and Instruction has been asked to review the departmental offerings and to study any possible proposals for reducing the cost of operation. Those proposals already have included the suggestion that all graduate work be dropped except such as can be conducted for department assistants. It has been suggested that we see if any of the departments, particularly those which are especially expensive, could be dropped from the curriculum until such time as financial conditions improve. In connection with this the question has been considered and will be studied further about the effect on our educational program of dropping such an auxiliary enterprise as the Page Memorial School. It would seem ironic in a day when the education of men and women for family life is receiving increasing emphasis to cut out the major opportunity for our undergraduates to study about little children by closing the Page Memorial School which is a fine demonstration of a good school for children between the ages of three and nine. It is, however, expensive and we must consider whether or not we can justify its operation in view of rising costs.

Another suggestion has been that we close the village houses which are so expensive to operate and reduce the size of the College to that which can be accommodated in the present dormitories. Knowing the difficulty that we now have in the selection of a freshman class of 465, it is almost unthinkable to contemplate cutting the number to the two or three hundred which would be necessary to decrease the capacity of the College markedly. However, that must be considered as a possible way to make both ends meet. Another proposal is that we should definitely curtail the number of scholarships and try to fill the College from that economic group which can pay its way whether or not the representatives of the more privileged families are as competent intellectually as the girl on scholarship. We are spending about $125,000 each year for which we have no endowment for the sake of subsidizing girls on scholarship. One partial way to meet this situation might be to ask all scholarship students to consider their financial aid as loan rather than as a grant in aid and thus try to replenish our coffers as girls earn money after graduation. Anyone who has dealt with college girls knows how difficult it is to encourage them to borrow money for college fees, and many students would prefer to go to less expensive colleges rather than to assume a loan. All of these suggestions for marked curtailment of budget items have their obvious difficulties. I refer to them to assure the trustees that we are entirely willing to consider all possibilities for balancing the budget which has now been out of balance for four very expensive years. Obviously we cannot continue this way indefinitely and it will be my effort in the year ahead to make proposals which may make it possible to come closer, at least, to a balanced budget in the following year.

WELLESLEY COLLEGE

As I have watched the work of our college women raising money on behalf of Wellesley, I have been impressed again with the organizational skill, the clear thinking, and the social mindedness of women who have received their education at Wellesley. They have seemed to me to demonstrate the value of the kind of education which is provided here, and I personally feel that anything which radically changed that type of education in the interests of economy would be a major loss to American society as well as to individual students in this particular college. I continue to believe that the society in which these Wellesley women are functioning values them highly enough so that it will not actually let the College change its nature drastically. It behooves us to select those elements in the college program which are essential to the training of the forward-looking type of alumna who is carrying the load of many communities. We can economize on the extras and the unessentials, but we must continue to maintain the type of college which can prepare women for the demands which the present day is making upon them. The willingness of Wellesley graduates to take responsibility for community ventures, their general insistence on being part of forward-looking rather than backward-looking movements, their willingness to work hard for the causes in which they believe, and their articulate support of those causes, make them people which society needs and recognizes. Our campaign has discovered more and more of them busily at work in enterprises which are indebted to Wellesley College. As they recognize their indebtedness, friends of those enterprises will, I feel sure, come to the help of the College which has fostered this type of civic leadership. It is with that assurance that I have called attention to some of the difficulties under which we labor and to the satisfactions which we achieve as the College goes on from strength to strength.

Respectfully submitted,

MILDRED McAFEE HORTON,
President.

REPORT OF THE LIBRARIAN

1947-1948

To the President of Wellesley College:

I have the honor to present the report of the College Library for the year ending June 30, 1948.

This is an interim report covering the interval between the resignation of Blanche Prichard McCrum as Librarian and the arrival of her successor, Florence Louise King. Miss McCrum left this library to go to the Library of Congress after ten years of faithful and whole-hearted service. Her reports for those years have presented the visions that she saw and the dreams that she dreamed, and the realization of many of them. In contrast, this report is necessarily brief and largely statistical, written by an Acting Librarian mindful of Miss McCrum's high purpose, inspired and motivated by it.

Miss King, then Librarian at Denison University, was appointed the new Librarian midway through the year. Since she was unable to take office at Wellesley before the end of the academic year she came, on January 11, for a visit of three weeks to give the benefit of her advice, and to consult and plan for the first year of her administration.

At the request of the President the writer accepted the responsibility of an Acting Librarian with the assurance that she might serve as chairman of an administrative committee, of which the Research Librarians, Margaret M. Boyce and Helen J. Sleeper, would be members. The advice and support of Miss Boyce and Miss Sleeper, throughout the year, and the hard work of a loyal staff made possible the achievements recorded here. The greater part of the work with special collections and exhibitions fell to Mrs. Hazel Godfrey when the Acting Librarian gave up her own specialty for administration. Special thanks go to Mrs. Godfrey for her efficient and conscientious performance of heavy and unusual duties.

Our chief objective for the year was to strive to serve the college community in the manner to which it is entitled and accustomed, despite the absence of Librarian and Assistant to the Librarian and frequent changes on the staff. To that end everyone worked tirelessly, rewarded by the co-operation and friendly understanding of Administration and Faculty.

The statistics appended to this report give some picture of the volume of work in the routine services of acquisition, cataloguing, circulation, and reference, rendered as a matter of course in all college libraries. Other services which are not always taken for granted, but are in the Wellesley tradition, deserve mention here, however briefly. A number of classes have met with faculty and librarians within the library for consultation of special materials; formal exhibitions have been held, some of them arranged for teaching purposes; many informal displays have called the attention of those passing through the Circulation Hall to world events as well as to campus activities, and to especially distinguished books; the Research Librarian in Bibliography has assisted honors students and others in many individual conferences.

Members of the faculty and library staff have met classes in Economics, English, French, German, Italian, Mediaeval Studies, and Political Science, within the walls of the main library, for the consultation of materials from special collections and for instruction in the use of subject bibliographies. Certain of these classes were followed by individual conferences with Miss Boyce, for members of the class who required further direction in the location of materials.

Ten formal exhibitions have been held, all from our own library collections with the exception of the annual showing of The Fifty Books of the Year, selected by the American Institute of Graphic Arts. Three of the exhibitions were arranged for study by classes which met in the library, and another, A Series of Four Wellesley Student Libraries at Twenty-five Year Intervals from the Founding in 1875, was arranged at the suggestion of the Committee for the Observance of the 75th Anniversary.

Books from our special collections were lent for an exhibition, held in the Boston Public Library, of the work of William Addison Dwiggins, distinguished designer of books, and a manuscript was lent for the Alice Meynell Centennial exhibition held at Boston College.

LIBRARIAN'S REPORT

The discharge of obligations to our own community is reported first since it comes first. Our contribution to the world of scholarship should not be overlooked, however. Wellesley lent from its own book collections, through inter-library loan, to other libraries throughout this country and to Canada and Puerto Rico. The work of checking our own holdings against those of the Library of Congress continues and cards were sent to the Union Catalogue for the Wellesley books which are not owned by the Library of Congress. Information regarding materials in our special collections was made available directly or through correspondence to scholars in the United States, Canada, England, and New Zealand. A list of our holdings of 712 books printed in the sixteenth century was sent to Brown University as Wellesley's contribution to a New England union catalogue of sixteenth century books.

Questionnaires were answered for eight institutions and associations requiring detailed information on such subjects as circulation policies and practices in college libraries, the method of keeping statistics of library holdings, inter-library loan service, government document collections, and virtually every aspect of college library service. Information regarding our Order Department was given, through questionnaire and personal interview, to Robert Christ, now Assistant Librarian at Duke University, for a valuable study of the order departments of Wellesley College and nine other comparable institutions.

The circle widened to the international scene in the contribution the library was proud to make to the Institute for Foreign Students held for the second summer, and to the Mayling Soong Foundation. Once again approximately fifty students from around the globe met in six groups with members of the library staff who taught them, by means of class appointments followed by individual instruction as needed, the terminology used in our libraries, the use of the card catalogue and the more general reference books, and the method of compiling a bibliography. Exploring the familiar by-paths of our own library system and explaining them to the satisfaction of European, Oriental and Spanish-American minds was challenging, stimulating and rewarding.

WELLESLEY COLLEGE

For the sixth successive year the Mayling Soong Foundation has made a grant to the library for the purpose of building "library resources as nearly ideal as possible for the study of China and her neighbors." This grant of five hundred dollars was reinforced this year by the Hazard Gift from the Class of 1903, a sum of three thousand dollars given for the purchase of books on Oriental art and literature. The list of books acquired through these funds during the past year includes titles published in the United States, England, Australia, China, India, Japan, Hawaii, and Holland.

In one of the major projects of the year professional co-operation worked entirely in Wellesley's favor. This was the preparation of a classification and salary schedule for our library staff. The librarians and officers of twelve colleges and universities contributed materials on their own plans, existing and projected, and our gratitude to them is boundless. This was a piece of unfinished business which weighed heavily upon Miss McCrum, and she had left Wellesley expressing the hope that a committee made up from members of the library staff might start, in the autumn, to study the literature of the subject and work up a memorandum for the President for inclusion in the data being collected for faculty salaries. The existing emergency in the shortage of librarians and the difficulty in maintaining a complete staff made this an urgent necessity.

When the new Librarian arrived in January for consultation she plunged at once into this work. Her assistance to the committee was invaluable and it was possible to complete a tentative Classification for Library Service, Graded for Positions and Salary Schedule only because Miss King gave all possible aid to the committee and worked with it unceasingly. The memorandum was placed in the hands of the President for her study and consideration. Although not yet officially adopted the plan has been very useful in clarifying the requirements for new members of the staff to be appointed for the following year.

The new classification includes provision for a new position carrying the title of Librarian of Technical Processes which will be filled for the first time, in 1948-49, by Beatrice M. Quartz, when she will have completed the work for her master's degree at the University of Michigan. In this new position the work of acquisitions, cataloguing, and binding will be co-ordinated just as the service functions of circulation, reference, and work with reserved books are already co-ordinated. The work of the former Assistant to the Librarian will be redistributed and that title will no longer be used. It was our good fortune to have an able person already on our staff with a number of years of experience in this library, to undertake this responsibility.

Regrettably enough it was necessary to report to our President, faced with a veritable sea of mounting costs as she is, that the purchasing power of the library book budget has declined dangerously because of steadily mounting increases in prices of books and the cost of periodical subscriptions and binding, so that our book collections cannot be maintained at their usual standard without a budget increase.

In the face of the discouraging state of our book budget we note with peculiar gratitude two gifts of money designated for the purchase of books, that of William G. Thayer, Jr., and that of Martha Hale Shackford listed in the Appendix. Our friends and donors who are listed there may be confident that their interest in the Wellesley College Library and support of it are of truly vital assistance. Proper appreciation cannot be expressed in words, but sincere and unceasing efforts to deserve that generous support may serve to discharge our debt in part.

Respectfully submitted,

HANNAH DUSTIN FRENCH,
Acting Librarian through June 30, 1948

REPORT OF THE TREASURER

1947-1948

To the Trustees of Wellesley College:

The report of the Treasurer for the year ended June 30, 1948 is submitted herewith. This report sets forth the financial condition of the College with various supporting schedules.

CURRENT OPERATIONS

For the fourth consecutive year, operating expenditures have exceeded income. This year's deficit was $174,027.85, compared with $104,012.30 a year ago; $121,979.36 in 1946 and $67,773.47 in 1945.

While increases in income from students' fees and endowment brought our total income to a figure substantially in excess of last year's, salary and wage adjustments amounting to $211,000, scholarship and fellowship increases of $22,000, provision increases of $35,000, fuel increases of $50,000, building maintenance increases of $55,000 as well as many items of smaller amount, more than offset the increase in revenues.

The rate of return on book value of investments was 4.97% before amortization of bond premiums and 4.93% after this deduction, compared with 4.88% for the previous year. This continued liberal return permitted the College to increase the original estimated rate of assignment of income to funds from 4½% to 5% which reduced the deficit first anticipated by approximately $65,000.

CHANGES IN RESERVE FUNDS DURING 1947-1948

	June 30, 1948	June 30, 1947	Increase or Decrease
Administrative Reserve Fund	$ 42,818.44	$ 169,270.81	-$126,452.37
Reserve Fund for Depreciation of Buildings	438,063.30	702,838.28	-264,774.98
Securities Income Reserve Fund..	304,134.65	300,425.80	3,708.85
Undistributed Profit or Loss on Investments Sold (Net Profit)..	213,852.82	166,028.24	47,824.58
	$998,869.21	$1,338,563.13	-$339,693.92

TREASURER'S REPORT

Interest was credited to the Reserve Funds at the rate of 5% as shown below:

Administrative Reserve Fund.....	$ 5,399.31
Reserve Fund for Depreciation of Buildings.....	28,532.36
Securities Income Reserve Fund.....	15,021.29
Undistributed Profit or Loss on Investments Sold (Net Profit).....	9,512.55
	$58,465.51

Although this assignment of income lessened the drain on our Reserve Funds, the continued excess of expenses over income has reduced the Administrative Reserve Fund and the Reserve Fund for Depreciation of Buildings to the danger point.

The Administrative Reserve Fund was credited with a total of $186,652.69 representing interest assigned as above shown, plus interest of $9,512.55 assigned and transferred from Undistributed Profit or Loss on Investments Sold Account. In addition, the entire expense of the 75th Anniversary Fund Campaign which had been charged to Administrative Reserve Fund was transferred to the Reserve Fund for Depreciation of Buildings, resulting in a further credit of $171,740.83. Charges include the year's operating deficit of $174,027.85, 75th Anniversary Fund expense for the year of $132,452.21 and a loan to Wellesley College Alumnae Association of $6,625.00, making a total of $313,105.06. The Reserve Fund was thus reduced by almost 75% during the year.

The credits to Reserve Fund for Depreciation of Buildings include the year's assignment of interest of $28,532.36; $15,000 for Navy House amortization; an amount of $3,883.14 transferred from Infirmary Building Fund; and $47,307.78 being interest at 3% on the 75th Anniversary Fund balance. These credits totaling $94,723.28 were dwarfed by charges of $359,498.26 representing excess of cost of repairs over averaged annual requirements amounting to $44,821.51; the charge of $171,740.83 for 75th Anniversary Fund expense transferred from Administrative Reserve Fund; Navy House building expense and equipment; down-payment on dwelling for faculty use at 18 Belair Road, Wellesley and redecorating of Claffin. This Reserve Fund was reduced well over one-third during the past year.

WELLESLEY COLLEGE

Securities Income Reserve Fund received $15,021.29 as its 5% assignment from the year's security income, but was charged $11,312.44 to provide the balance necessary to pay 3% on the 75th Anniversary Fund balance.

Net security profits for the year added $48,042.61 to the Undistributed Profit or Loss on Securities Sold Account. Since the book value of all securities sold during the year was $1,793,259.64, this represented a profit of 2.68%.

PLANT AND RELATED MATTERS

There was a net increase of $148,028.87 in plant capital during the year, bringing the total to $13,387,993.68 on June 30, 1948. This increase is accounted for as follows:

Completion of the erection and equipping of Navy house for a dormitory.

Deposit for purchase of property at 18 Belair Road, Wellesley.
Additions to equipment for Departments and Dormitories.

The College has found it necessary in the past several years to add housing facilities for faculty and staff members which accounts for the purchase of further properties.

Outside property rented for dormitory purposes consisted of:

House at Wiswall Circle
Webb House on Washington Street
Joslin House on Washington Street
Elms House on Washington Street

The past winter was one of the most severe on record and abnormal accumulations of snow and ice exacted a heavy toll on College road surfaces, trees, shrubs and buildings, necessitating an extraordinary amount of repairs.

TREASURER'S REPORT

CONCLUSION

The economic trends that have been so detrimental to the financial position of all privately endowed institutions did not ameliorate during the past fiscal year. What signs there were of a reversal in the cost-of-living spiral were more than nullified by the effects of the Marshall Plan and the renewed armament program. There has been a very substantial drop in most basic farm commodity prices which in time is bound to make itself felt on the food index; this is an important factor in the College budget. Unfortunately, many artificial supports and controls are still being exercised in Washington which tend to extend the normal lag between a drop in raw material prices and the cost-of-living index.

I still feel that we must attack Wellesley's financial problems from within rather than hope for a solution from without. Even though costs decline with a recession in business, we must recognize the fact that we still are in a long term inflationary trend which in my judgment will only be permanently arrested through a return to a hard money base. Every effort is being made to reduce expenditures through the curtailment or elimination of activities that are not absolutely vital to the basic educational objectives of the College. However, even after making the most optimistic estimates of the savings that might accrue, it is apparent that consideration must be given again to a further increase in tuition if the College budget is to be restored to balance.

No privately endowed institution can long retain its freedom of educational aims if its finances are allowed to become impaired. So far Wellesley's strong reserve position has cushioned the shock of four years of substantial deficits, but now our reserves have become dangerously depleted and steps must be taken to safeguard the enviable financial strength that the College has enjoyed.

2. The expenses of the Seventy-fifth Anniversary Fund for the year ended June 30, 1947 were met from the Administrative Reserve Fund and were not presented on this exhibit in the report for that year. During the year under review it was voted to meet the total expenses of the Fund from the Reserve Fund for Depreciation of Buildings by transferring to it all expenses previously charged against the Administrative Reserve Fund and to continue to charge against it any subsequent expenses of the Fund. These amounts for the comparative years are presented above.
